

Patriarchy is being reflected in Putin's mentality

Today I have washed my face in tears.

Putin's behaviour is a symptom of a very patriarchal society. Did someone really believe that Putin, after his treatment of the Russians, and neighbours, had any «good faith» in his motivation. The only motivation is controlling, and the strongest feeling in him is based in a need to be the best, and to be the center of the world. Every move he has made in his life is based on that need. Every move he has done is a need to control every person, in the aim to be the only one that matters. It is a broken ego, and a man unable to handle his feelings.

My tears are as much an expression of the sadness of our own lack of understanding. That the Patriarchal mentality is the psychology of the ego, that is traumatized in the lack of security. It is a culture of no more than a power struggle that sees love as weakness.

It is a culture of «punishment», and it is the only answer a damaged ego can reflect. Everything is stressed in persons that live in such an environment, it is an unsafe place, the whole society. You see the stress expressed when one is having power and opportunity, the psychology is though never in a love state.

There will not be peace in a state of mind that needs so much, to control everyone and suppress every person, that is not in the alignment of serving the ego to the damaged narcissist.

Please stop the hate talk, please stop the invoking of the death wish to the one that we don't like. Hate is hate, it can not solve any challenge that is based in lack of love.

We need to see that love is the only issue and alternative. Love is not to accept suppression, but the action of love is not rooted in hate for anything, but for love for the oppressed. This nuance is the most important difference between hate and love.

In love we understand when the ego is out of control. In my opinion, Putin has been on this path of autocracy, tyranny and terror of his opponents, all his career. The rest of the world could/should have stopped him in the very start of his dictatorship. In a learning perspective, I see this event as just one more opportunity, to see the damage and the horror the wounded ego results in. It is just one more opportunity to see all the damage the patriarchal hierarchical ideas lead us. The idea in the psychology of fear will never give peace.
